ENTEGRIS LAUNCHES JAPANESE VERSION OF ITS NEW WEBSITE

New site localized for enhanced support for customers in Japan

BILLERICA, Mass., June 6, 2017 – Entegris, Inc. (NASDAQ: ENTG), a leader in specialty chemicals and advanced materials solutions for the microelectronics and other industries, has announced the launch of a Japanese version of its new website. The new site, originally launched in English last September, has been localized in order to support customers in Japan. The site brings an all-new design that offers an enhanced customer experience through simplified navigation, a robust search function, improved product selection capability and responsive design for mobile devices. The new site launch was part of the company's 50th Anniversary celebration and reflects a focus on providing "pure" solutions for its customers.

"Japan is an important market for Entegris, and is home to several of our top IDM, equipment and chemical customers, as well as our key supply chain partners. Conversion of our new website to support our markets in Japan was a high priority for us," noted Entegris Regional Director of Japan, Takashi Mizuno. "The redesign and translation provides our customers improved access to company and product information and reflects our commitment to offer world-class customer support."

Entegris, headquartered in Billerica, Massachusetts USA, announced its 50th Anniversary and rebranding effort in 2016. The company, founded in 1966 as Fluoroware, has approximately 3,500 employees worldwide, more than $1 billion in annual revenue and stands as one of the largest global, high-performance, specialty materials companies serving the microelectronics and other industries.

The Japanese site will be automatically visible to visitors within Japan using the standard www.entegris.com address. Outside of Japan, users can access the Japanese site by choosing
