Entegris Named by Forbes Media to Publisher's List of America's 100 Most Trustworthy Companies

BILLERICA, Mass., Nov. 26, 2012 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Entegris, Inc. (Nasdaq:ENTG), a global supplier to the semiconductor and microelectronics industries, was named by Forbes Media to the publisher's list of America's 100 Most Trustworthy Companies.

To develop the list, Forbes used data generated by an independent financial analytics firm called GMIRATINGS (GMI). GMI evaluated more than 8,000 publicly held companies on a broad range of metrics and company policies, including executive compensation, management turnover, insider trading relative to corporate peers, and short-term executive compensation. While only three companies scored the highest score of 100, Entegris was one of only two mid-cap companies that scored a near perfect 99.

According to James A. Kaplan, the chairman of GMI, those companies that rank high in GMI's Equity Risk Ranking typically have a positive forecast for equity returns, and have minimal likelihood of financial distress. "Many studies have shown that well-governed companies with transparent accounting have a higher price premium than their competitors, reduced cost of capital, and a higher long-term return for shareholders," Kaplan said.
